Early Life and Career

Ada Gary Greenwald was born in New York City in 1940. She studied art at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and the University of California, Berkeley. In the early 1970s, she emerged as a leading figure in the feminist art movement. Her work was often political and confrontational, and she used her art to challenge traditional notions of gender and sexuality.

In 1972, Greenwald co-founded the Feminist Art Studio in Los Angeles. The studio provided a space for women artists to create and exhibit their work. It also became a center for feminist thought and activism.

Mature Work

In the 1980s, Greenwald's work began to evolve. She became increasingly interested in the use of multimedia, and her work began to incorporate elements of sculpture, video, and performance.

One of Greenwald's most famous works from this period is "The Dinner Party" (1979). This monumental work is a triangular table set with 39 place settings, each representing a different woman from history. The table is decorated with intricate carvings and symbols, and it has become an iconic symbol of the feminist movement.

In the 1990s, Greenwald continued to create groundbreaking work. She explored the themes of identity, memory, and loss in her work, and she often used her own body as a medium for her art.
