Excerpt

"The decision to go to war in Iraq was one of the most difficult decisions I made as president. I knew that it would be a controversial decision, and that it would have far-reaching consequences. But I also believed that it was the right decision, and that it was necessary to protect the United States from the threat of terrorism.

I made the decision to go to war based on the intelligence that I had at the time. I believed that Iraq had weapons of mass destruction, and that it was a threat to the United States. I also believed that Saddam Hussein was a brutal dictator who needed to be removed from power.

The war in Iraq was a long and difficult conflict. Many brave Americans gave their lives in service to our country. But I believe that the decision to go to war was the right decision. It made the United States safer from the threat of terrorism, and it helped to liberate the Iraqi people from a brutal dictatorship."

Decision Points is a valuable resource for anyone interested in American history and politics. It is a well-written and engaging account of one of the most consequential presidencies in recent history. I highly recommend this book.
