Q: What was the most challenging part of writing Subterranean?

A: The most challenging part was creating a believable and immersive world beneath the surface of the earth. I wanted to make sure that the tunnels and chambers felt real, and that the creatures that inhabited them were both terrifying and believable.

Q: What do you hope readers will take away from Subterranean?

A: I hope that readers will be entertained by the story, but I also hope that they will be inspired to think about the unexplored depths of our planet. There is so much more to the earth than we know, and I hope that Subterranean will spark their imaginations.
