Le Flambeur was born in France in the early 19th century. He was a brilliant scientist and inventor, but he was also a gambler and a risk-taker. He was drawn to the impossible, and he always seemed to find a way to achieve it.

Le Flambeur's most famous feat was his escape from the Bastille prison in Paris. He was imprisoned for his gambling debts, but he managed to escape by using a combination of science and trickery. He built a glider out of wood and cloth, and he used it to fly over the prison walls.

Le Flambeur's escape from the Bastille made him a legend. He became known as the 'Master of the Impossible', and he was sought after by people from all over the world.

The Causal Angel follows Le Flambeur's adventures as he travels the world, performing seemingly impossible feats. He travels to England, where he challenges the laws of gravity by levitating a horse. He travels to the United States, where he builds a submarine that can travel underwater for weeks at a time.

Le Flambeur's adventures are always thrilling and suspenseful. He is constantly pushing the limits of human possibility, and he always seems to find a way to achieve the impossible.

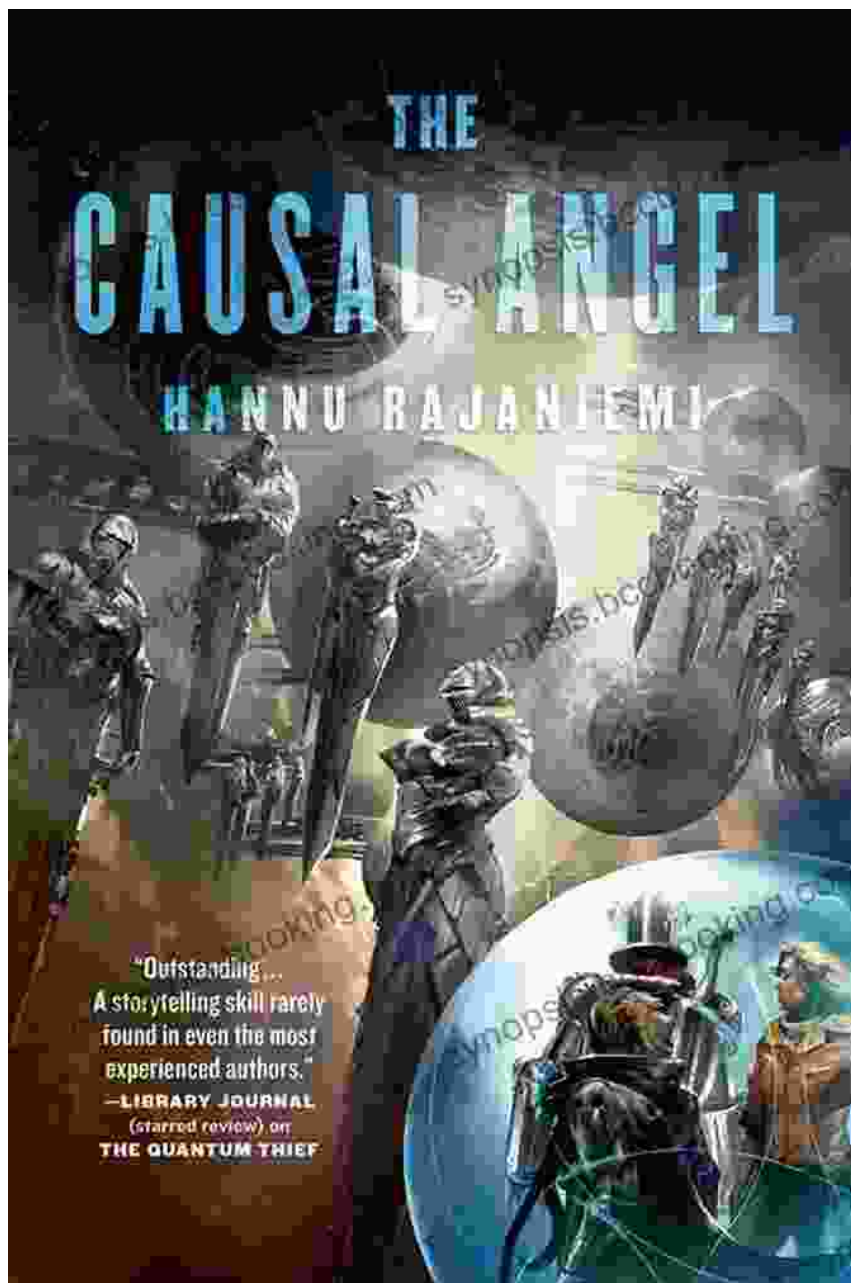

The Causal Angel is a historical novel that is both thrilling and suspenseful. It is a story about a man who was willing to risk everything to achieve the impossible. It is a story that will stay with you long after you finish reading it.
