Gene Deitch: The Man Behind the Masterpiece

Born in Chicago in 1924, Gene Deitch began his artistic journey as a cartoonist for Harvey Comics. His early work showcased his remarkable talent for character design and storytelling, paving the way for his legendary career in animation.

In 1959, Deitch embarked on an extraordinary adventure, relocating to Prague, Czechoslovakia, where he would establish himself as one of the most influential figures in European animation. His collaboration with Bratři v Triku, a renowned animation studio, resulted in a plethora of critically acclaimed films and television series, including the iconic "Tom and Jerry" cartoons.

The Birth and Rise of Nudnik

Amidst his prolific output, Deitch's inspiration struck during a visit to a local Prague pub. There, he observed an eccentric elderly man who became the model for Nudnik. With his distinctive grey plumage, piercing gaze, and wry humor, Nudnik was born.
